Punkt 7: The use of AI

- Thematic discussion about the use of AI
 - The university has banned use of AI in all exams. However, the students use it regardless especially in project work. What is the study board's opinion about how we can teach the students to properly use AI in their studies?
 - see attached document from Martin Stampe Nor and Søren Larsen (09/10/2023) "Retningslinjer for og udmelding om de studerendes brug af generativ kunstig intelligens som f.eks. ChatGPT i skriftlige eksamener på RUC" the study board discussed the need for more guidance about what is accepted and what is not accepted use of AI in project work and course exams. In general the study board agreed that there need to be a systematic approach to the use of AI in a meaningful way.

Beslutning

Helene said that she had planned a meeting with the course leaders for the methods courses to discuss how to teach the students about AI, but had to postpone due to illness. She will reschedule the meeting. The Study board supported the idea of asking the course leaders for BC/BK6 to include AI in their class about research ethics.

The study board supported Helene's idea to have a seminar for supervisors about when AI is acceptable in project work and a similar workshop for the students, both seminars will be held in the Spring semester.

elective - Economic Frontiers in Science Fiction: Some members of the study board thought that there isn't enough academic literature and thought the course description looked too much like a humanities course instead of a social science elective course. Helene will contact the course leaders and ask them to make the social science element of the course more visible in the description of each class.

The board is asked to discuss the matter.

Appendix:

List of BA methods courses for co-teaching of BA- and MA-students

Beslutning

several members of the study board were concerned about whether the same student can take the 'same' methods course twice - once as a BA student and once as a MA student. Helle said that the system could prevent this from happening.

a member was concerned about the progression from BA to MA level and how this would reflect on the MA programmes reputation.

the study board discussed the need for differentiated learning objectives and exams to distinguish between BA and MA level.
